

Catalogue of Lantern and Ledger — Draven Ashgrove & Halvard Sablewood

Issued beneath the soot-black seal of the auction hall, for those who prize a name more highly than a face.

Draven Ashgrove

Description: A minor character of the Ashen Era, born in 382 AS. Draven Ashgrove serves as a Lantern-Warden.

Nature of the Offering: The purchaser is invited to bid upon the written account of his office, the authority implied by his title, and the lingering worth of a name carried beneath a hooded lamp. No blade, cloak, lantern, seal, or other personal article is entered here. Let no grasping hand claim otherwise when the hammer falls.

Appearance: No physical features are recorded. His visual identity is associated with the office of a Lantern-Warden. Thus the imagination supplies what the record withholds: the lamp before the face, the warding sign, the figure standing where the dark is deepest. Such impressions are not evidence, but auctions have never prospered on evidence alone.

Demeanor: No temperament is recorded. Buyers are cautioned against purchasing their own assumptions under Draven Ashgrove's name.

Condition: The account is intact insofar as the record is intact. Its silences are genuine and should not be polished away. The hall accepts no complaint that the subject fails to resemble a portrait that was never made.

Halvard Sablewood

Description: A minor figure of the Ashen Era, born in 408 AS. Halvard Sablewood serves as a scribe.

Nature of the Offering: Offered here is the scribe's standing as a keeper of written matter: the authority suggested by a hand that copies, marks, preserves, and perhaps outlasts the mouths of the living. No manuscript, quill, desk, robe, or private document is included. The catalogue sells the account, not the furniture imagined around it.

Appearance: No canonical physical details are recorded. His visual identity is associated with the work of a scribe. Buyers may picture ink-stained fingers, bent shoulders, or a patient eye, but the catalogue will not swear to any of these. A profitable fiction remains a fiction.

Demeanor: His canonical temperament is unrecorded. The hall therefore offers no promise of meekness, severity, diligence, deceit, or any other quality a bidder might wish to attach to Halvard Sablewood.

Condition: Unadorned, incomplete, and resistant to embellishment. The record bears what it bears. The rest is silence, and silence has fetched a handsome price in less honest rooms.

Bids are accepted in names, oaths, or other tender deemed acceptable by the auctioneer. All claims are final once spoken aloud.
