

Catalogue of Perilous Holdings: A Sale of Sapper's Work and Siege-Breaking Vermin

Issued under ash-stained seal, for the instruction of bidders and the preservation of good sense.

Morwenna Vosgard

Classification: Minor character Calling: Sapper Birth Record: 296 AS

The house offers this entry not as a portrait, for no portrait may be honestly made. Morwenna Vosgard possesses no recorded physical features. Her visual identity is associated instead with the work of a Sapper: cut earth, packed powder, opened stone, braced tunnels, and the patient preparation of ruin.

Those who require a face, stature, coloring, or distinguishing mark are advised to seek another catalogue. None is recorded here. None should be supplied by guesswork, tavern embroidery, or the flattering lies of sellers.

Morwenna Vosgard is a minor character, yet the word minor must not be mistaken for harmless. A Sapper's labor is often measured only after the wall has fallen, the gate has buckled, or the ground has ceased to be trustworthy. Her demeanor is not recorded. Whether she worked in silence, cursed the stone, sang beneath her breath, or stared without feeling at the places she weakened, the ledger offers no answer.

Condition: Known by profession; appearance and temperament unrecorded. Suitability: For collectors of military craft, ruinous expertise, and persons whose deeds are more legible than their faces. Bidding Counsel: Do not bid upon imagined features. Bid upon the certainty that a Sapper's work leaves a mark.

Lantern Moth Swarm

Classification: Creature Use: Siege-breaker of serious threat

A dense cloud of moths carrying the eerie visual impression of lantern-light. This is no decorative flight of harmless night-things, nor a tame curiosity for a shuttered hall. Acting as a collective, the Lantern Moth Swarm brings mothlike disruption against fortified positions.

Its movement is said to press upon the senses before it reaches the walls: a restless shimmer, a trembling veil, a glow that seems to gather where no lamp has been set. Stone, timber, watchfires, and disciplined ranks are all made less certain beneath its passage. Escape is difficult. Containment is not to be presumed.

Condition: Restless, overwhelming, and difficult to escape. Suitability: For siege-breakers, ruin-seekers, and buyers with more fortification than wisdom. Bidding Counsel: Keep all lamps covered until the lot is secured. If the light appears to multiply, withdraw from the premises without attempting to count it.

Clerk's Final Notice

Morwenna Vosgard and the Lantern Moth Swarm are entered as distinct catalogue subjects. The former is known through the work of a Sapper; the latter through collective disruption and lantern-like apparition. Let no bidder confuse a blank record with safety, or an eerie light with guidance.