

Covenant of Silent Custody and Quarantined Passage

Let this instrument be read beneath a shuttered lamp and entered without song.

I. Party of the First Seal

Sabelle Mournvale the Twice-Crowned, serving as High Inquisitor, being born in 263 AS, is herein named the First Seal. Their office shall not excuse them from the burdens written below, nor shall their crownings diminish the weight of their word.

The First Seal's demeanor is one of inquisitorial severity shadowed by concealed necromantic custody. It is therefore acknowledged, without ornament or denial, that Sabelle Mournvale the Twice-Crowned keeps a bound revenant in their cellar. This custody shall remain concealed from the unlicensed eye, and the revenant shall not be loosed, traded, fed upon the living, or employed in any work not permitted by this covenant.

II. The Instrument

The Silent Psalter is entered as the instrument under protection. It was forged in 204 AS and bears an attunement cost of 49. Though made for expression, it is defined by silence and the grave discipline required to wield it.

The Silent Psalter resembles a somber devotional instrument, its form muted and visibly fashioned for silent use. It evokes restrained sorrow and an oppressive quiet that resists release. No signer shall compel it to give voice where silence is its lawful nature. Any attempted attunement shall be undertaken with full knowledge of the cost of 49, and no claim of ignorance shall unmake the consequence.

III. The Bound Place

Hollowreach lies in the Gloaming Reach and was founded in 56 AS. Hollowreach is a core location under quarantine, presenting the stark visual identity of a quarantined settlement in the Gloaming Reach. It feels closed, isolated, and burdened by containment.

Accordingly, no passage into or from Hollowreach shall be treated as ordinary passage. The First Seal shall honor its quarantine, shall not open a sealed way for convenience, and shall regard every threshold there as a question asked by the dead. The Silent Psalter shall not be carried through Hollowreach except under the silence demanded by this covenant.

IV. Forfeiture

If the bound revenant escapes, if the Silent Psalter is used without grave discipline, or if Hollowreach's containment is knowingly broken, this covenant shall be considered stained. Its remedies shall be silence, seizure, and the closing of every permitted road, as the surviving authority deems fit.

Thus marked, witnessed, and sealed without music.
