

MUSTER ROLL OF HOLLOWVALE, HOLLOWREACH, AND THE SALT-BLIND LE

Copied into the black-bound register for the instruction of wardens, quartermasters, and such officers as still possess the sense to read. Let no mark be altered without seal, witness, and a hand steady enough to hold the pen.

Entry | Place or Creature | Former Muster / First Record | Present Condition | Strength or Threat | Ren
I | Hollowvale | Founded in 286 AS | A defended vale in the Blood-Moor, remaining outside the realm's
II | Hollowreach | Founded in 56 AS | Lies in the Gloaming Reach; a core location under quarantine | N
III | Salt-Blind Leviathan | No founding entry; creature muster | Not a holding, settlement, or garrison |

SUPPLEMENTAL WARDEN'S NOTES

Hollowvale is to be read as a place under guarded vigilance, not as a refuge. The 7,594 troops recorded against it are its declared garrison; the register does not say that every spear is rested, fed, or willing. Still, the number stands, and numbers are the nearest thing the Ashen Era has to certainty.

Hollowreach is to be read as a closed wound. Its founding in 56 AS places it among the old core locations, yet quarantine has made isolation its governing shape. No easing of containment is entered here. No promise of release is entered here. The blank spaces are intentional.

The Salt-Blind Leviathan is not to be judged by the absence of a gaze. Sightless eyes do not mean blindness of purpose. Do not mistake its slow movement for hesitation. The proper response to its approach is to strengthen what may be strengthened, abandon what cannot, and report the breach without embellishment—unless embellishment is the only way to make the living understand.

End of roll. Ink dried under poor light. Seal pressed while the hand still trembled.
